Marsh-Land Marsh-Land.
All day long the marsh-land
As a bride is seen;
Decked with ruff of branching reeds,
Pranked in garment green.
Ouckoo-flowers for necklace,
And her girdle holds
Yellow luster, boss on boss,
Of marsh-marigolds.
Reed-birds warble round her—
Bees buzz in and out,
And the sun with tender
Fold on fold of splendor,
Robes her round about.

All night long the marsh-land Like a corse is clad— Like a corse is clad—
Streckit corse, enshrouded corse, chastly, grim and sad, Cleaves the white fog closely, As face-cloth unto face—
Cleaves and covers, fain to hide Death's supreme disgrace.
Shrieks the wind above her, Hoots the owl "tu-whoo!"
And the moon with slender Arrow-shafts of splendor, Smites her through and through.

Dies the daylight—the wind blows harsh—Sing heigh-hol and a Well-a-way!
This is the middle of the marsh,
The place of pit-falls. Here I stay;
Here I open the door of my heart—
Loves and dreams, you must needs departLoves and dreams, and honey and gall,
Here I scatter you, bne and all,
With your faith and fears—your trouble

toil, Like a bitter seed on a bitter soil.

Down drops the sun from the world of men—
Sing heigh-ho and Well-a-way!
Here in the middle of the fen,
The place of pit-falls, still I stay.
Are they gone? I cry, are they gone, my heart?
Have you thrust them out in pitliess part?
Are they whirled aloft? are they trodden below?
"Nay," groans my heart, "they will not go.
Loves and dreams, and honey and gall—
I must keep them all, I must keep them all."

From this date until the 17th of next March it will be lawful to of next March it will be lawful to shoot these kinds of game, and among the hills and out on the broad marshes the booming of the fowling-piece will be heard daily, almost hourly. The Sierra foothills furnish good quailshooting, and the lover of this kind of sport—the best that California can afford, many find plouter of received for the second of the summer house, which the gladiole rocks the bee to sleep.

Tis sweet upon some balmy autumn night to drop into the feathery vale of sleep.

And sail in boats of pearl, with satin sails, Down silvery streams. To lie 'neath cooling tree in gold-laced hammocks, drinking tender sights of zephyrs stealing o'er the hearts of flowers. And then to wander down a garden walk which the gladiole rocks the bee to sleep. afford—may find plenty of work for his gun and dog within twenty miles of Sacramento by taking either the Central Pacific or Sacramento Valley Railroads. Over in the coast Range there is still better quail-shooting to be had, while high up near the Summit the hunter can have excellent shooting among the mountain quail, and—if he be energetic and not afraid of a little work—may now and then bag a brace of grouse. Later in the season, and on into the spring, the valley shooters find good sport in shooting the English snipe, which in certain localities abound in considerable numbers. Deer, rabbits, doves, geese, etc., serve to fill in odd days when other game is scarce. On the whole, the California sportsman ought to be happy, if a long open season and plenty of wild game is conducive to the happpiness of that class. We trust that most shooters will learn to hunt with moderation and not seek to kill the greatest possible quantity of game in greatest possible there is still better quail-shooting to be had, while high up near the Sumshortest possible time; for, in by all sensible members of the fraternity.—[Sacramento Bee, Sept. 15. The Old Story.

The advocates of "still" hunting and those who believe in the legitimacy of pursuing deer with hounds are reviving their old disputes through the press. The question is not so much as leer—the still-hunter or the man with hounds run the deer out of their favorite localities. Experience has proven that they do, and it is on this ground ooting may be just as sportsmanlike as the other, or it may not; men have their own individual opinions on the subject, and this point we do not care to discuss. But we do not hesitate to say that a pack of hounds will in one on clear a whole neighborhood of its deer.-[Sacramento Bee.

A Good One.

We had a call on Monday last from Mr. B. O. Bush, of Kalamazoo, Mich., who told us the following, which is too good to keep: The Kalamazoo Gun Club recently prosecuted and convicted a man for violating the game law by shooting a wild turkey during the close season. After the trial, it transpired that the informer and witnes was prompted to his action by the fact that he had, after enduring much dis-comfort and long waiting, succeeded in calling up a fine gobbler, when just as he was about to cover him with his gun, the report of another gun and the fluttering of the gobbler in the pangs of death revealed the presence of the individual on whom he informed, who had been secreted but a short distance from him .- [American Field.

The Brook in the Meadow. What more beautiful water than the brook threading its way through the meadow, its banks fringed with shrubs and flowers, or studded here and there with shade trees? The clear water, with the darting silversides, th cresses, the plunge of the startled frog, the splash of birds at their ablutions, the turtles roasting in the sun, the swift crossing of the muskrat, if no dangerous sounds are heard—all these dangerous sounds are heard—all these and a hundred other events fill up the beside the brook. And then com cows, with solemn, stately tread daintily tasting the flowing water, then venturing farther, until the group stands knee-deep, with swaying tails and philosophic mood, enjoying the cooling shade and cooling water—a picture of rural quiet beyond compare—[Sacramento Rec are.— Sacramento Bee.

Two hunters were in town yester Two hunters were in town yester-day, just down from the mountains, and they tell a frightful story of the fire in the woods a few miles west of Cloverdale. Their camp was almost surrounded by fire before they knew it, and they only saved their tent, guns and dogs by burning off the grass from an open place and moving to it.—[Petaluma Argus.

The route did not embrace the American portion of the city, and after circling Sonoratown the procession returned to the plaza, where the literary exercises Well furnished and well ventilated took place. Hon. R. F. del Valle was the first speaker, and he made a most rooms to let in the Signoret Building, corner of Main and Turner streets, opeloquent address in the Spanish language. Mr. del Valle is a natural orator, posite the Pico House, by Mrs. Wm and added to his gift is a good educa-tion and pleasing address, and he always strikes a popular chord on occasions of this kind. Mr. F. H. Howard followed in a very neat address in English, and Mr. B. A. Yorba again spoke in Spanish. The people then disbanded to meet in the mery drace.
